Paper Submission Guidelines for GermEval 2021 Shared Task

Check List

- [ ] Please create your paper using ACL-Style sheet: http://acl2020.org/downloads/acl2020-templates.zip (Note: Package includes both sheets for Word and LaTex). Paper submissions should be in pdf-format.

- [ ] Please give your names and affiliations on your paper. Your paper should not be anonymized.

- [ ] Your team id should occur in the title of your submission. This way, your paper can be found easily in the overview proceedings.

- [ ] Your paper should be written in English.

- [ ] The length of the paper should be between min. 4 and max. 6 pages, references exclusive.

- [ ] The paper should be understandable and comprehensive, without major language deficiencies.

  - External people who are familiar with the topic but not with the details of GermEval should be able to follow the descriptions of the paper.
  - Please make sure that your paper includes at least an abstract, an introduction, and a conclusion in addition to the main part.

  - Please describe the design of the system built for participation (which approach/model architecture was used? What features were used, etc.).

  - Please make sure your paper does not include too many/too serious formal flaws so we can consider it for the further review process.

  - Feel free to get inspired by paper submission of recent year's GermEval Shared Task (Overview: https://germeval.github.io/tasks/), e.g., on the Identification of Offensive Language in 2019.

- [ ] You might want to cite the GermEval 2021 overview-paper in your own paper. Citation information will be provided before the final submission deadline in august.
